TOM PAINE AND STEPHEN CULLEN CARPENTER.

With the close of the Revolutionary War, and after the interval of a few years in which the yet heated elements, had to cool and settle into form and quiet, the evidences of growth became more and more conspicuous. The revolutionary strife itself had given an active impulse to the popular thought, and a hardy freedom to its mind, which naturally sought various modes of utterance. At first, and naturally, politics and party furnished the principal fields of letters. The great men of the day were controversialists—the newspapers became frequent vehicles of speech. Pamphlets continued to issue from the press, and the private correspondence of the leading men—valuable to us now could it be recovered—sufficiently occupied the leading minds of the country. The periodical began to appear in small weekly quartos, or in slender and small octavos upon the English model of that day, such as were issued by Carey in Philadelphia. Stephen Cullen Carpenter published a monthly in Charleston for one or more seasons, which blended literature and politics unusually together. He was a bitter controversialist, and came in collision as such with the famous Tom Paine, then held in no little esteem by Jefferson and others.

A story, told of Paine and Carpenter, was current fifty years ago, of which we may say with the Italian, "Si non e vero, e ben trovato." Their controversies, as was much more common in those days than in ours, usually grew into coarse and bitter personalities. Paine was the abler writer of the two, whether dealing in argument or abuse. Carpenter, and Irishman, worsted at both weapons, resorted to one natural enough to a son of green Erin. He appealed to the cudgel, and made a special visit to Philadelphia in order to try his shillelah upon his adversary. He called at Paine's lodgings for that purpose, having first announced to the public his intentions. Paine had little stomach for any warfare beyond that of the pen. He had as little desire to be found by his creditors. He occupied an upper room, from the windows of which he could scan his visitors. The outer door was always kept religiously locked. Looking out and seeing Carpenter and his club—it was occasionally described as a cowskin—he called to Carpenter to wait. But Carpenter waited in vain. Paine quietly went back to his fauteuil and continued his writings of the day. Carpenter knocked and knocked again, but like knockings at Macbeth's castle, nothing came of it; and tired out, the cudgeller retired but with bitter curses and renewed threats. He told his story, and repeated his visits always with the same results. At length the wags of the town took part in the affair; one set went to Paine, another to Carpenter. To Paine they said: "It will never do; it will run you forever, to be bullied in this manner by such a fellow, and one who is so notoriously a coward that if you shake a bulrush at him he is sure to run."

"A coward is he!" said Paine, a little curiously.

"Notoriously! He has been kicked repeatedly in Philadelphia, New York and Charleston, and has yelled, and howled, and cursed, and reviled, but never struck a blow in his own defence. Now, Paine, it will be quite a disgraceful joke against you, if it begins to be so now, if the poor devil whom everybody kicks can boast that he kicks or cudgels you."

"Never fear me," said Paine; "he will never be able to make such a report."

"But he is even now doing so. He boasted only last night at ———'s coffee house that he would starve you to death, since the fear of his cudgel has kept you from putting your nose out of your dwelling, even to get your dinner, for the last three days."

Paine quietly pointed to a cupboard where he had a bushel of crackers and half a cheese, to say nothing of certain poorly bottled. Then, with dignity, pointing to a pile of manuscripts:

"There," said he, "is what has kept me in doors, and not the dread of Carpenter's cudgel. My pamphlet is now finished, or will be finished to-night. I shall be upon the streets to-morrow. I shall be prepared for Carpenter's cudgel!"

The party that visited Carpenter had a story for his ears of different character.

"You are lucky, Carpenter, at your escape. It is well for you that you did not meet Paine. He is slow to move, is constitutionally timid, and is now busy with one of his most scorching pamphlets and says nothing, but "Wait till this be done!"

To corner a timid man, even a coward, is the most dangerous of all experiments. The deer in such cases becomes the bulldog. Now, you had not left ———'s coffee house ten minutes last night, when

Paine came in with two horrid horseman's pistols in his bosom looking after you."

"The devil he did!" cried Carpenter, growing suddenly pale.

"Yes; and when we asked him what it was that bulged out from his bosom, he answered coolly, Only a few lead pills which a certain friend of mine needs for an attack of the liver!"

From that hour the parties walked the streets, but on opposite sides, preserving two parallel lines which were destined never to meet.

THE DEAF WIFE AND AUNT.

I had an aunt coming to visit me for the first time since my marriage and I don't know what evil genius prompted the wickedness which I perpetrated toward my wife and ancient relation.

"My dear," said I to my wife on the day before my aunt's arrival, "you know Aunt Mary is coming to-morrow. Well I forgot to mention to you a rather annoying circumstance with regard to her. She is very deaf, although she can hear my voice, to which she is accustomed, in its ordinary tones; yet you will be obliged to speak extremely loud in order to be heard. It will be rather inconvenient, but I know you will do everything in your power to make her visit agreeable."

Mrs. ——— announced her determination to be heard, if in her power.

I then went to John N——, who loves a joke about as well as any person I know of, and told him to be at the house at six P. M. on the following evening; and, comparatively happy, I went to the railroad depot with a carriage next night, and when I was on my way home with my aunt, I said:

"My dear aunt, there is one rather annoying affliction that Annie (my wife) has, which I forgot to mention before. She is very deaf, and although she can hear my voice to which she is accustomed, in its ordinary tones, yet you will be obliged to speak extremely loud in order to be heard. I am very sorry for it."

Aunt Mary in the goodness of her heart, protested that she rather liked speaking loud, and to do so would afford her great pleasure.

The carriage drove up—on the steps was my wife—in the window was John N——, with a face as solemn as if he had buried his relatives that afternoon.

"I am delighted to see you," shrieked my wife. And the policeman on the opposite sidewalk started, and my aunt came near falling down the steps.

"Kiss me, my dear," bawled my aunt. And the windows shook as with fever and ague. I looked at the window—John had disappeared. Human nature could stand it no longer. I poked my head into the carriage and went into convulsions.

When I entered the parlor, my wife was helping Aunt Mary to take off her hat and cap; and there sat John, with his face buried in his handkerchief.

Suddenly, "Did you have a pleasant journey?" (went off my wife like a pistol, and John nearly jumped to his feet.

"Rather daisy," was the response in a warwhoop, and the conversation continued. The neighbors for blocks around must have heard it. When I was in the third story of the building, I heard every word of it.

In the course of the evening my aunt took occasion to say to me.

"How loud your wife talks!"

I told her deaf persons talked loudly and that my wife, being used to me, was not affected by the exertion, and that she was getting along finely with her.

Presently my wife said softly:

"Alf, how very loud your aunt talks!"

"Yes," said I, "all deaf persons do. You're getting along finely with her. She hears every word you say." I should rather think she did.

Elated at their success at being understood, they went at it hammer and tongs, till everything on the mantle piece clattered again, and I was seriously afraid of a crowd collecting in front of the house.

But the end was near. My aunt being of an investigating turn of mind was desirous of finding out whether the exertions of talking was injurious to my wife. So—

"Doesn't talking so loud strain your lungs?" said she, in an unearthly whoop, for her voice was not quite as musical as when she was young.

"It is an exertion," shrieked my wife.

"Then why do you do it?" was the answering scream.

"Because—because—you cannot hear me if I don't, squealed my wife.

"What!" said aunt, fairly rivaling a railroad whistle at the time.

I began to think it time to evacuate the premises, and looking around and seeing John N——, I stepped into the back parlor; and there he lay flat on his back, with his feet at right angles with his body, rolling from side to side, with his fists poked into his ribs, and a most agonized expression of countenance, but not uttering a single word. I immediately and involuntarily assumed a similar attitude, and I think from the relative position of our head and feet, our attempt to restrain our laughter, apoplexy must have inevitably ensued, if a horrible groan, which John gave vent to in his endeavor to restrain his risibility, had not betrayed our hiding place.

Judge Dent—brother in-law to Grant,—who is to be run as the Conservative candidate for Governor in Mississippi thus touches off Boutwell:

Washington, D. C., August 17, 1869.

To Hon. Geo. S. Boutwell, Sec'y of the Treasury.

Sir—I shall make little apology for asking your attention to my letter, and less for the nature of its contents. You were the first to deny the political orthodox of my friends and myself, and by all the rules of the forum I am entitled to a defence. Again, you hold an office of the republic, and your acts, therefore, are legitimate subjects of criticism by the humblest citizen thereof. But in some respects we are alike. For instance, we are both aspirants for place, with this difference: You aim to be the next President, with every assurance of success, "except" in the opinion of the people.

While I seek a humbler place, with my hopes in disastrous eclipse, "except" in the judgment of Mississippi, so in the probable results of the future we both stand adverse to the judgment of the country. In the pursuit of your ambition you are ungrateful and unscrupulous as to the means of success. Your organ, the New York Sun, in the same breath ridicules the capacity of your master, and dwells with emphasis upon your peculiar fitness for his office.—Your tool, Mr. Bullock, became so reckless in the manipulation of your department in the interest of your ambition, and so defiant of the wishes of the President and the country, that to save yourself from an explosion of popular indignation you found it convenient to transfer him to another sphere of scandalous activity, where his talents might be exerted with equal effect and less effrontery. Virginia, Tennessee, Mississippi, and Texas, not to mention anything so humble as myself, were obstructions in the way of your success, because through President Grant's intervention in excluding the proscriptive clauses from their organic law these States are brought into the Union and firmly welded to his support.

Now, this is in direct conflict with your systematized plans; for what General Grant gets in the next presidential election clearly Mr. Boutwell will not get, and therefore have you denounced the Conservative Republicans who, are for Grant, that you may obtain the proscriptive Republicans, who are for Boutwell; and by some strange, dexterous management and occult political strategy, you have so worked upon the confidence of the President as to cause him to flourish the club with which you intend to break his head by inducing him to join you in denunciation of the Conservative Republicans—a party created by his magnanimity and triumphant through his encouragement.

But, sir, "your purpose is easily discernible, and has a two-fold object—namely, to destroy the National Republican party in the South, and then to reconstruct from its shattered fragments a Boutwell party, with one Richmond in the field to strike for your crown. But if you cannot succeed in this scheme of desperate enterprise you mean to ruin"—a result, from present appearances, much more likely to be reached.

Your official intervention for Wells, for instance, gave thirty thousand majority to Walker. Your letter to Stokes gave Senter Tennessee by an overwhelming vote of seventy thousand. Your marvellous political sagacity, now active in Mississippi and Texas, will repeat your calamity and again overwhelm you with discomfiture and defeat. Superadd to these results of your unapproachable folly the imposition on these States of your iron clad oath, and the alienation is complete, landing them all in the outstretched arms of the Democracy.

But the consequence of your folly does not stop here—Ohio and Pennsylvania and others will follow. Decide their political status in October, and the North will echo back the condemnation of the South, and peal in your ears this fact, that there is still left enough of the incorruptible virtue of the republic to rebuke you for a wanton repression of that most sacred right [the elective franchise]. But, sir, this will not deter you from your mad course; you will still persist until every prop that supports our party is stricken away and the whole grand

W. We think with pleasure of visiting Danville at this time of year. Because we expect, reader, to eat some of the biggest tomatoes you ever saw. You ask where? Why at our friend—W. & Patton's—the excellent and popular Banker in that town. He raises 'em.

Personal.

The Rev. Robert Burwell who was the esteemed Pastor of the Presbyterian Church at this place for many years is now in this town. Mr. Burwell now resides in Charlotte.

Wood.

This is the greatest country for wood you ever saw. If a body hasn't got the money—he'll pay you in wood. An old country gentleman the other day actually offered to take himself and his whole family into the circus—"if they'd take it out in wood." But the man said he was sorry; wasn't going to stay but one day, and didn't have any use for it. But we'll take wood for the Recorder every time.

How the World Wags.

The long dry spell we are having is operating differently upon different minds. Fear and trembling have seized the loins of a certain class. They begin to want to "get ready." To this end there is screaming and loud shouting and phrenzied praying going on o'nights. A colored man informs us that an old negro man in town has had a vision of a division of angels from the North, South, East and West, and they told him there would be no more rain for 40 months. In the neighborhood of Milton, (38 miles off), the negroes believed the world was coming to an end last Tuesday week. The night before they shouted all night and prayed till day break. Again;—when the sun was in eclipse at this place—we observed an "old aunty" cut one eye at it, and immediately she broke out into one of her "meetin' pieces," singing away for dear life.

This is all well enough. Prayer is good at all times. But if some one of our colored friends would just let chickens and politics rust a little lower while they continue in their religious gymnastics—they would receive a beneficial benefit, and would begin to grow in grace as well as the eastern of all honest people.

The School Picnic.

There was quite a racy time at the school examination of Miss Wright—who teaches near S. T. Forest's—on last Thursday week. The little folk acquitted themselves astonishingly well—indeed some of the old gray heads vowed it was a College on a small scale. There were dialogues, and declamation and composition; then there was a capital table spread and devoured; and then the Rev. Mr. Michaux delivered an off hand spicy speech. The reserved gentleman mimicked the school urchin as he used to spatter over his spelling book with his feet hanging over a high bench.

He told the chaps that his school-master used to come to school bare footed and with his breeches rolled up to his knees. That if he had his way he'd take one half of the College bred chaps now and put them at an "old field school" to learn the multiplication table and to spell.

To Keep Cool—Drink that SODA WATER of GATTIS' SO COOL. SO REFRESHING.

CAN SUCH THINGS BE, CANBY?—That while the despot of France is opening the prison doors to political offenders, and granting universal amnesty to other classes of prisoners, can it be that you, Canby, in this free republic, have the conscience to insist upon the rigid application of a form of oath—giving your own interpretation therein, by the way—that was only intended for operation at a certain critical period now long since passed and gone? Verily, there seems to be more justice and moderation in Imperial France than in Republican Virginia under thy rule, Canby!

DEATH OF A GOOD MAN.

From the Charlotte Observer.

Hon. J. W. Osborne died at his residence in this City, yesterday morning, at 11 o'clock.

In common with the whole community, we mourn the loss of this great and good man. "Death loves a shining mark," could not have been better exemplified than in the death of Judge Osborne, for he was not only a "shining light" in this community, but was loved and revered by the citizens of the State generally.

At another time we will publish a sketch of the life, character and services of this eminent scholar, jurist and statesman.

SINGULAR AND FATAL CASE OF POISONING.

The Providence Press states that Dr. Francis L. Turner, a physician of Newport, died on Thursday last, as is supposed, from the effects of poison. About a year ago a package of arsenic, which he was carrying in the pocket of his coat, broke open and spilled the contents. He removed most of the substance and thought no more of it. Some time after he ate some cookies which he had put in the same pocket, and soon after was seized with illness, one of the features of which was a partial paralysis of one of his legs, and from which he gradually sank till his death as above.

A COOL PROCEEDING.—A married couple in this county, says the Evansville (Ohio) Courier, who had been living together for something over a year, separated recently in a very peculiar manner, and, to say the least of it, under very unusual circumstances. We know nothing about their married life, whether it had been happy or otherwise, but suppose it to have been very agreeable between the parties. The husband came home to dinner one day, as usual, and while eating his wife said to him, "Stephen, you had better eat a hearty dinner, for it is the last that I will ever cook for you." He inquired what she meant and she informed him that she had just received a letter from a young man (a former beau) whom she loved better than any one else in the world; that she was going to leave her husband and go to him; and that she never loved (Stephen) her husband. After dinner was over she attired herself neatly, and soon after a hack called, her trunk (already packed) was placed on it, the woman got inside, the driver cracked his whip, and away went the wife from home and husband forever. Such are the circumstances of the case as they have been told to us.

The New York World, in commenting on the sudden popularity of enfranchisement of the "white folks" of the South, expresses the following very decided opinion:

"The anomaly of keeping down the superior race is a failure, after five years of Congress and the army to bolster it up.—This is the abandonment of reconstruction. Its key-stone was white disfranchisement. That pulled out, the whole arch falls. It has fallen, and will soon be buried out of sight."

Farm Yard Scraps.

A root of clover five feet long has been exhibited at Centreville, Mich.

A little spirit of ammonia is said to be the best known remedy for bee stings.

A Maine farmer fattened a cow chiefly on turnips, and the result surpassed expectation. The beef was of fine quality, and the tallow unusually abundant.

Lands that are overstocked not only yield less food, but the animals pastured upon them make a less yield in beef or milk than when the stock is in proportion to the capacity of the lands for producing food.

A hungry light sand is not good for apple trees, neither is a heavy clay. Potatoes and corn furnish about as good an analysis of soils for apple trees as any of our chemists can. Wherever they grow well we expect that apple trees will do the same.

Take a sharp wire, watch your trees regularly, and dig out the borers the moment they appear. Stubble, grass and weeds away from the crown of the root so that it will be exposed, and you can see the enemy whenever he makes a mark.

Three important reasons why clover should always be grown with timothy. First the clover being tap rooted penetrates deeply, stands drought, mellow the soil, and the timothy grows much stronger and holds up the clover. Secondly, it sown for pasturage the timothy almost universally prevents the clover from swelling cattle. Thirdly, hay is too binding, especially for cattle, and clover too watery (succulent,) hence both together are better than either alone.

The newest thing under the sun is grafting potatoes. The mode of operation is to take two potatoes, one of each variety, the good qualities of which it is wished to combine. With a pocket knife cut all the eyes clearly out of one of them, and substitute in their place the eyes cut out of the other. The eyes to be inserted should be sprouted and cut in the form of wedges and inserted into cuts of the same shape and size in the other potato; they are held in place by hair pins, and bound with bass matting or wire.

Every bushel of wood ashes applied to the corn crop is worth one dollar. The truth of the assertion has been readily demonstrated by the result of experiments accurately conducted. On all light soils the action is highly energetic and salutary; they exert a warming and invigorating influence, and promote the rapid growth of almost every species of vegetable production.

Miss Asphyxia gives as a reason for declining to marry a widower the fact that she is down on second hand children.

What is the difference between very young and very old women? The first are careless and happy; the second, hairless and cappy.

An English paper advertises for sale a pew which "commands a view of nearly the whole congregation."

Greely observing the "black" appearance of the sun during the eclipse, was heard to observe, "Doesn't it need reconstruction?"

Loving wife, at Long Branch: "The horrid surf makes me keep my mouth shut." Sarcastic husband: "Take some of it home with you."

Josh Billings says: "I don't believe in bad luck being set for a man like a trap; but I have known lots of folks, who, if there was any first rate bad luck lying around loose, would be sure to get one foot into it anyhow."

A shoemaker was fitting a customer with a pair of boots, when the buyer observed that he had but one objection to them, which was that the soles were a little too thick. "If that is all," replied the maker, "put on the boots and the objection will gradually wear away."

"But if I put my money in the savings bank," inquired one of the newly arrived, "when can I draw it out again?" "Och," replied his friend, "sure an if you put it in to-day, you can draw it out again to-morrow by giving a fortnight's notice."

The following notice was pasted on a large box which passed over the Pacific Railroad a few days since: "Baggage-smashers are requested to handle this box with care, as it contains nitro-glycerine, Greek fire, gun-cotton, and two gorillas."

Two Irishmen, on a sultry night, took refuge underneath the bed-clothes from a skinning party of mosquitoes. At last, one of them, gasping from heat, ventured to peep beyond the bulwarks, and, by chance espied a fire-fly which had strayed into the room. Arousing his companion with a punch, he said: "Jamie, Jamie, it's no use. Ye might as well come out! Her's one of the crayters sartin' for us wid a lantern."

During the occurrence of the great solar Eclipse on Saturday last a colored individual who had become greatly elated, exclaimed: "Bress de Lord! de nigger's time have cum at last, we's now gwine to hab a black sun."

The following recipe is useful in all one horse towns and villages.

Take a handful of the weed called Ran, about the same quantity of the root called Nimble tongue, a sprig of the herb Rock-bite, a tablespoonful of don't-you-tell it, six drachms of malice, an ounce of selfishness, a few drops of Envy, which can be purchased in any quantity at the shops of Miss Tabitha Teatable and Miss Nancy Nightwalker. Stir them well together, and simmer them for half an hour over the fire of Discontent, kindled with a little Jealousy, then strain it through the rag of Misconception, and cork it up in the bottle of Malevolence and hang upon a skein of Street Yarn; shake it occasionally for a few days, and it will be fit for use. Let a few drops be taken before walking out, and the subject will be able to speak all manner of evil and that continually.

RURAL SONG OF THE CARPET-BAGGER

Not a drum was heard nor a funeral note,
As his corpse to oblivion we hurried.
When the carpet-bagger was buried.
We buried him deep in dirty soil—
So deep that they'll never uncover him,
Unless some radical boring for oil.
By the dearly-loved scent should discover him.
His coffin was made of a ballot box,
With white men's votes we bound him,
And he looked like a baboon taking his rest
With his linen duster around him.

FITLY CONCLUDED.—We published a day or two ago a poetical description of the funeral of the carpet-bagger in Virginia. A gentleman has suggested the following lines in conclusion. They are appropriate and to the point:

His carpet-bag we placed on his tomb,
With his paper collar within it.
On that we laid his fine tooth comb,
With a Jerusalem traveller upon it.
Journal of Commerce.

And—saith the Recorder—please allow us:
He traveled North and told the news
How the 'bagger was dead that fed it;
The devil he is well—he got his dose
Cried his friends to the l—e that said it.

CAUTION! WE desire to warn the dealers in, and consumers of snuff generally, that since the war, certain tobacco manufacturers, being unable to find a market for their snuff, felt themselves obliged to counterfeit the general appearance of our packages, and imitate our Trade Marks, so that a close inspection is necessary to detect the spurious article from the genuine, and others going so far as to assert that "Lorillard's Snuff is no longer made."

In making this publication we desire to warn the public against the impositions practiced upon them; as they are the losers thereby. It will be found upon comparison that Lorillard's Snuff is "far ahead" of all others, being made of the best stock, after an original and secret process known only to ourselves, besides possessing great age, strength and pungency, and is warranted not to contain any dangerous or deleterious substances, which cannot be said of the many worthless articles put on sale by others. The best is the cheapest in the end. A circular will always be mailed on application. In ordering please specify if Salt Snuff (High Toast), or Fresh Snuff (Extra Scotch) is desired.

TO THOSE SUFFERING WITH PUL-

MONARY DISEASE.

DR. THOMAS H. MILES, continues to treat

Thoracic diseases by Topical Medication, or Catheterism of the air passages, conjoined with appropriate general remedies, as practiced by the late

Prof. Green, of New York. The success attending this method of treating diseases of the lungs, is unparalleled, and the feasibility of the operation generally conceded. This treatment is almost a specific for Bronchitis, Laryngitis, Incipient Tuberculosis and Asthma. Numerous testimonials can be adduced from those who have been entirely relieved by the operation. His address is Mount Carmel, Halifax county, Va.

Near Yanceyville, Caswell co., N. C.

April, 1869.

This is to certify that I have been suffering for several years with chronic Bronchitis; attended with all the symptoms of incipient Consumption; during this period, I had frequent hemorrhages from the lungs. I also suffered greatly from enlarged Tonsils. I tried the usual remedies in such cases, but without satisfactory results. I finally concluded to try Dr. Miles' treatment of catarrhs of the air passages by injection.

I remained under his treatment for six weeks; rejoice to say that I believe my lungs are entirely relieved. I will say that excision of the tonsils added greatly to my relief. I most cheerfully recommend this treatment to all persons similarly afflicted.
